My own numbers from my own dashboards, as of November 2026.

Powerful men hire Lola Whitman to write their memoirs, and they never know the FBI is listening. Then the world's youngest billionaire finds her in a dusty Arizona bookstore and wins her yes in a desert street race, and the one man she can never be honest with becomes the one she can't stop watching back. She was sent to destroy him. She fell in love with him instead.

I wrote it from inside the job. I'm a working memoir ghostwriter for tech founders and Olympic athletes, and the book started with a cheeky what-if from my Hollywood years: wouldn't the FBI want one of us in the room? It's set in San Francisco and wine country, with a private jet, a lighthouse suite on a fog-wrapped estate, and a party on Alcatraz. A forbidden slow burn with a morally gray billionaire, a fake relationship as cover, open-door scenes, and a happily-ever-after, for readers 18 and up who love First Lie Wins, Verity and The Ghostwriter.

WHAT AN EVENING LOOKS LIKE

My favorite format is an after-hours hour with something meatier than a signing: a conversation with a bookseller or a local author, or a short talk with Q&A, then a signing. A daytime meet-and-greet works too. Below is copy for your event page and socials, ready for your date and time.
